FRANKFORT MAY GET BETTER CAR SERVICE SOON

Frankfort is living in great hopes that its transportation problem may be solved before long. A rumor has gained circulation that the Michigan Central railroad is seriously thinking of putting on gasoline cars, to be operated every two hours, from Gary to Joliet. These cars would carry passengers, express, milk and mail. It is understood that a meeting is to be held in Frankfort soon to discuss this matter. The Michigan Central recently sent a questionnaire to the local agent relative to Frankfort's transportation service, and on the heels of this comes the report of the railroad figuring on putting the cars mentioned in operation. If this scheme is carried out, it will mean a big thing for the Michigan Central, as well as for Frankfort, for such a service would be well patronized, and the railroad has a splendid territory from which to draw patronage. The Michigan Central has a good roadbed, and by using gasoline cars, would not need any extra equipment, as is needed by a trolley line. This would beat any service that a trolley line could give, as there would be no danger of the power giving out, as was often the case with the old trolley line. The gasoline cars can be operated between 35 or 40 miles per hour.

School Districts Must File Tax Levy on Time

Many school districts thruout the county fail to realize that if they do not get their tax levy returns in by the first Tuesday in August, their districts will not receive a cent of taxes if the attorneys for the railroad discover that such levies have been filed after the proper date. Also written records must be kept of these meetings in which tax levies are made.

F. J. Kohlhausen, treasurer of the school fund for Frankfort township, calls on all the school district officials in Frankfort township to hold their annual meeting in July, and return their tax levy schedules to him not later than the first Tuesday in August, so that he, in turn, can turn them in to the court house in Joliet, as required by law. Furthermore,

150 Attend Re-Union

The largest home gathering or family reunion in the history of Mokena took place on the Hirsch Bros. farm Sunday, when Mr. and Mrs. Julius Hirsch entertained at a giant family reunion in honor of their newly married son Carl and bride.

Things were done up in great style. The proverbial "fatted calf" was killed, not for the return of a prodigal son, but because the son was married. A calf was killed and roasted for the occasion. A very elaborate feast was served at noon, the table groaning under the weight of the sumptuous feast. The tables were set out on the lawn, and 150 guests partook of the feast.

Following the dinner a mock marriage was held, in which a double wedding was solemnized, the bridal couples being Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hirsch and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Diesel, of Chicago, the latter being newlyweds of a week and cousins of Mrs. Julius Hirsch. The wedding "march" was played by Frank Hirsch, Jr., on a toy saxophone, and Fred Froesch of Chicago acted as the "parson" and tied the nuptial "knots." There were the usual "bridesmaids," "maids of honor," "best men," etc. This "wedding" caused much hilarious merriment.

The great barn was cleaned out and a barn dance was held following the festivities on the lawn. The Wachter orchestra furnished the music for the occasion. In the evening the guests were dined again at a very sumptuous supper.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hirsch received many beautiful gifts. The guests present were from Dayton, Ohio, Blue Island, Chicago, Riverside, Gary, Ind., Plainfield, Joliet and Mokena.

Mr. Kohlhausen asks all school district officials to be sure and keep a written record of the meeting at which the tax levy was made, showing what date the meeting was held, who were present, the amount of the tax levy, who made a motion and who seconded it, and whether the motion carried. All these technicalities are being closely watched by railroad attorneys, and if a flaw is found, the railroads cannot be compelled to pay any school taxes, and even local taxpayers could get out of paying these school taxes if they found a flaw and entered a protest. So all school district officials are admonished to be careful this year and get their tax levies in on time and keep a perfect record of the meeting at which such levy or levies were made.

HUNDREDS ATTEND LAYING OF CORNERSTONE OF NEW ST. JOHN EVANGELICAL CHURCH MOKENA

The greatest event in the history of the St. John Evangelical church of Mokena occurred Sunday afternoon, when the corner stone for the beautiful new $15,000 edifice was laid, the impressive ceremonies being witnessed by hundreds of people, who came from not only the entire surrounding countryside, but from many neighboring towns as well. The weather being ideal, the people came in autos, by train, and even horse and buggy.

The opening services were held in the old church building, beginning at 2 o'clock. The Rev. G. Lambrecht of St. Peter's Evangelical church of Frankfort preached the corner stone sermon, in which he pointed out that only with the spirit of the Lord in the hearts of the congregation can the new edifice be the success it should be to the glory of God. He showed that as the heaven of heavens cannot contain the spirit of God, no edifice built by human hands could contain this spirit, but by having the right spirit among themselves, the congregation could glorify and praise God in the temple where His glory dwelleth.

Rev. W. E. Uhrland of Blue Island preached in English along the same lines as Rev. Lambrecht. He also pointed out that members of the congregation should not ask, "What is it going to cost me?" but rather should say, "How much am I privileged to give?"

The choir sang a number of selections.

At the close of the service at the old church, the entire assemblage marched to the site of the new edifice. The march was headed by Hirsch's band, followed by the local and visiting pastors, members of the building committee and the congregation. Here further impressive services were carried out. Rev. E. Palmer, pastor of the Mokena M. E. church, took part in the services and offered a prayer. As the male quartet of St. Peter's Evangelical church of Frankfort could not be present, as had been scheduled, the band played a few selections.

The laying of the corner stone was in charge of Rev. Wm. Kreis, the local pastor of St. John's. He placed the following in the copper box which was placed in the corner stone: A copy of the Evangelical hymnal, the Bible, a catechism, church papers, a brief history of the movement started in 1919 by the Brotherhood of St. John's for the erection of the new church, and other church documents, including a copy of the constitution, a copy of the corner stone laying program printed in German and English, and an envelope containing coins now in circulation. After all these articles were placed in the copper box, it was sealed, placed in the corner stone and sealed in the stone. The copper box was a gift of Krapp Bros. of the Mokena Hardware Co., and the white marble corner stone, bearing the inscription, "St. John's Evangelical Church, A. D. 1922," was the gift of the Wunderlich Granite Co. of Joliet. After the stone had been placed, all of the visiting pastors and each member of the building committee approached the stone and said a verse of Scripture, tapping the stone with a gavel at the same time.

Rev. Freitag, the oldest minister of the Evangelical Synod of Northern Illinois also took part. He is the father of Mrs. William Kreis of Mokena.

At the close of the ceremonies, the pastors, building committee, congregation and visitors enjoyed a social hour in charge of St. John's Ladies' Aid, following which a bountiful spread was served at the Hatch hall by ladies of St. John's, who, under the leadership of Mrs. E. P. Krapp, had prepared a bountiful repast for all their guests, free of charge. A free will offering at the tables was taken. About 140 guests were accommodated at the tables at a time.

C. L. Reynolds of Mokena Goes With Southern Railroad

Charles Reynolds, who has been in the employ of the Rock Island for many years, has just been offered a like position in the general offices of the Sea Board Air Line at Portsmouth, Va., at twice the salary he had been receiving at the Rock Island, and left Wednesday to take up his new position. Mr. Reynolds is a veteran railroad man, and his abilities were readily recognized by the officials of the southern road, hence his promotion to the splendid new position. Mrs. Reynolds and son George will join Mr. Reynolds soon, and the household goods will be moved as soon as a place for a home can be found at Portsmouth by Mr. Reynolds. The many friends of "Charley" are sorry to see him leave, but wish him much success and happiness in his new work and new home. Mr. Reynolds and family have resided in Mokena for the past eight and a half years.

Mrs. W. R. Lynk Named as New Post- mistress for Mokena

Announcement was made last week that Mrs. W. R. Lynk had received her appointment as postmistress of Mokena, succeeding Mrs. Sadie F. Grogan. This makes the second postmistress for Mokena. Mrs. Lynk will take charge of her office after July 1st. For the present it is planned to locate the postoffice in the room next to the Mokena Hardware Store.

No Lightning Loss In 53 Years Due To Use Of Lightning Rods

F. L. Hasenjaeger, of the Green Garden Wire Insurance Co., reports that this company has not had a single fire loss caused by lightning wherever a farm building has been equipped with lightning rods, during the past fifty-three years. Mr. Hasenjaeger points out that a good lightning rod on a farm building insures the farmer against fire by lightning, as has been proven time and again. A good lightning rod not only saves the farmer from having a fire, but saved him the time and labor of rebuilding in case of a loss where buildings are unprotected. Mr. Hasenjaeger recommends that every farmer in this section protect his farm buildings with lightning rods.

Auto Speeding In Mokena Must Be Stopped Says Mayor

Mokena is being infested with auto speeders of late, some reckless drivers going as fast as 35 to 40 miles an hour, evidently thinking the village streets are speedways. It is said that some of the local autoists are worse than outsiders in this speed craze. Mayor Geo. J. Hacker says that this practice is dangerous to the citizens of the village, and if not stopped, the law will have to take a hand in the matter.

Marley Will Have A Real Big 4th of July Program; Big Stunts

A patriotic celebration and old-time basket picnic will be held at Marley on July 4th. An oration will be delivered by Rev. H. E. Rompel of Joliet. The musical program will consist of patriotic songs and music by the famous Graded School Band of 36 pieces, from Joliet. There will be a full day of races, sports and funny stunts of all kinds, beginning at 10:30 a. m. Two noted baseball teams will fight for honors. Dinner served promptly at noon. The program will be directed by the Marley Brotherhood, and the proceeds will all go to church work. All neighboring towns are invited to cooperate.

Tinley Park Wallops Frankfort 6 to 5

The Tinley Park A. C. ball team, which has stood 5 defeats in a row, partly redeemed themselves last Sunday by defeating the fast Frankfort team by a score of 6 to 5. The reorganizing of the team and good support of the citizens of Tinley Park has finally put a team on the field that can put up an argument with any team in the surrounding territory, and the management wants to hear from teams that have defeated Tinley Park this season, namely Mantene and Orland, to play at Tinley in the near future, as the Tinley Park A. C. will not travel from their home grounds after playing the Frankfort team at Frankfort next Sunday, June 25.

The features of Sunday's game were the hitting of Center Fielder Upton of the Frankfort team, he having got two 3-base hits and a home run in four times at bat, and the splendid pitching of Geo. Schilling for Tinley Park, who was only hit hard in two innings.

Chautauqua at New Lenox Big Success

The New Lenox Chautauqua, which closed Sunday, was a rousing success. The programs furnished were great, and were so much enjoyed that the Chautauqua for next year is assured again with forty-four signers backing it. This is more than ever signed up before, so it goes to show that the Chautauqua has made a decided hit in New Lenox. A petition is out now to get signers agreeing to purchase a season ticket for next year, so that by the time the next Chautauqua comes enough season tickets will be sold to pay for the expenses, thus leaving less for the guarantors to pay, and perhaps enough money will be raised so the guarantors will not have to put up anything next year.

SPANISH DOUBLOONS

By CAMILLA KENYON

COPYRIGHT THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

Plans were discussed for transferring the pirates from the cave to the cutter, for they were to be taken to Santa Marina to meet whatever punishment was thought fit for their rather indefinite ill-doing. They had not murdered us, they had robbed us of nothing but the provisions they had eaten; they had, after all, as much right on the island as ourselves. Yet there remained their high-handed conduct in invading our camp and treating us as prisoners, with the threat of darker possibilities. I fancy that Santa Marinar justice works mainly by rule of thumb, and that the courts do not embarrass themselves much with precedents. Only I hope they did not shoot the picturesque Tony against a wall.

The power-schooner, manned by a crew from the cutter, was to be taken to Santa Marina also. Senor Gonzales remained with us for the day as our guest, and on the next the boats from the cutter took off the pirates from the cave. We did not see them again. Through the convenient elasticity of Santa Marinar procedure, Mr. Tubbs was herded along with the rest, although he might plausibly, if hypocritically, have pleaded that he had complied with the will of the invaders under duress. Aunt Jane wept very much, and handed me Peanons of Passion with the request that she might never see it again.

We parted from Senor Gonzales not without regrets. It was an impressive leave-taking—indeed, Senor Gonzales in his least word and gesture was impressive. Also, he managed subtly and respectfully to impart to me the knowledge that he shared Titian's tastes in the matter of hair. On his departure he made a pretty little speech, full of compliments and floral specimens, and bestowed upon me—as being mine by right, he earnestly protested—the two bags of Spanish doubloons.

"Since the above was written, Mr. Shaw has run across Tony on the San Francisco water-front. Tony tells him that they got off with three months' imprisonment. The American consul interested himself and the schooner was restored to her owners, who were Tony's relations and hence did not prosecute. Before the discharged prisoners left the republic Captain Magnus was stabbed over a card game by a native. Mr. Tubbs married a wealthy half-caste woman, the owner of a fine plantation, but a perfectly genuine Mrs. Tubbs from Peoria turned up later, and the too much married H. H. was obliged to achieve one of his over-night flittings.

CHAPTER XX.

The Bishop's Chest.

We waited nine days for the coming of the Rufus Smith. During that time an episode occurred as a result of which I sat one morning by myself on the rocks beside the sloop, on which such ardent hopes had been centered, only like the derelict itself to be wrecked at last. It was a lonely spot and I wanted to be alone. I felt abused, and sad, and sore. I realized that I was destined to do nothing but harm in the world, and to hurt people I was fond of, and be misunderstood by everyone, and to live on—if I wasn't lucky enough to meet with a premature and sudden end—into a sour, lonely, crabbed old age, when I would wish to goodness I had married anybody, and might even finish by applying to a Matrimonial Agency.

As I sat nursing these melancholy thoughts I heard a footstep. I did not look up—for I knew the footstep. I should have known it if it had trodden over my grave.

"I take it you are not wanting company, you have come so far out of the way of it," said Dugald Shaw.

Still I did not look up.

"Nobody seemed to want me," I remarked sulkily, after a pause. He made no reply, but seated himself upon the rocks. For a little there was silence.

"Virginia," he said abruptly, "I'm thinking you have hurt the lad."

"Oh," I burst out, "that is all you think of—the lad, the lad! How about me? Don't you suppose it hurt me, too?"

"No," he made deliberate answer. "I was not sure of that. I thought maybe you liked having men at your feet."

"Liked it? Liked to wound Cuthbert—Cuthbert? Oh, if only it had not happened, if we could have gone on being friends! It was all my fault for going with him into the cave. It was after you had buried the skeleton, and I wanted to see poor Peter's resting-place. And we spoke of Helen, and it was all frightfully melancholy and tender, and all at once he—he said it. And I meant he never should!" In the soreness of my heart I began to weep.

"There, lassie, there, don't cry!" he said gently. "The boy didn't speak of it, of course. But I knew how it must be. It has hit him hard, I am afraid."

"I suppose," I wept, "you would have had me marry him whether I wanted to or not, just to keep from hurting him?"

"No," he answered quickly. "I did not say that—I did not say that I would have had you marry him. No, lassie, I did not say that."

"Then why are you scolding me?" I asked in a choked whisper.

"Scolding you? I was not. It was only that—that I love the lad—and I wish you both so well—I thought perhaps there was some mistake, and—it would not matter about me, if I could see you both happy."

"There is a mistake," I said clearly. "It is a great mistake, Dugald Shaw, that you should come to me and court me—for some one else."

There was silence for a while, the kind of silence when you hear your heartbeats.

When he spoke his voice was unsteady.

"But the boy has everything to offer you—his ancient name, his splendid unstained youth, a heart that is all loyalty. He is strong and brave and beautiful. Virginia, why couldn't you love him?"

"I could not love him," I replied, very low, "because my love was not mine any more to give. It belongs to—some one else. Is his name ancient? I don't know. It is his, and he ennobles it. Cuthbert has youth, but youth is only promise. In the man I love I find fulfillment. And he is loyal and brave and honest—I am afraid he isn't beautiful, but I love him the better for his scars."

After that I sat quite still, and I knew it depended on the next half minute whether I went all the days of my life crowned and glorious with happiness, or buried my shame and heartbreak under the waters of the cave.

And then Dugald Shaw took me in his arms.

By and by he said huskily: "Beloved, I had no right to ask you to share such a life as mine must be—the life of a poor sailor."

At this I raised my head from its nestling-place and laughed.

"Ask me? Silly, I asked you! Of course you could have refused me, but I depended on your not having the courage."

"And indeed that is a charge I'll not allow—that I am so little of a man as to let my courting be done for me. No, no, it was my love compelling you that made you speak the words you did—the love of a selfish man who should have thought only of shielding you from the hardships of such a wandering, homeless life as mine."

"Well, Heaven reward you for your selfishness," I said earnestly. "I am thankful you were not so noble as to let me throw myself at your head in vain. I have been doing it for ever so long, in fact, but it is such a thick Scotch head that I dare say I made no impression."

"Sweet imp! You'll pay for that—oh, Virginia, if I had only something to offer you!"

"You can offer me something that I want very much, if you will, and at no cost but your strong right arm."

"It is an arm which is at your service for life—but what am I to do with it?"

"And indeed that is a charge I'll not allow—that I am so little of a man as to let my courting be done for me. "Sweet imp! You'll pay for that—oh, Virginia, if I had only something to offer you!"

It was not long before Dugald was back again with spade and pick. He tore off the shrunken, sun-dried boards from the cabin roof, and fell to work.

It was not, after all, a labor of Hercules. The cabin was small and the chest large. I watched with the pride of proprietorship the swift ease with which the steel-sinewed arms of the Scot made the caked sand fly. Then the spade struck something which sent back a dull metallic sound through the muffling sand.

I gave a little shriek of excitement. Hardly could I have been more thrilled if I had believed the chest still to contain the treasure of which it had been ravished. It was filled to its brass-bound lid with romance, if not with gold.

At length, kneeling before it, I raised with an effort the heavy lid.

"Empty, of course—no more brown bags. But oh, Dugald, had ever a girl such a wonderful bride's chest as this? O—oh!"

"What's wrong?"

"Nothing, only there is a crack in the bottom, running all the way along where it joins the side."

"Warped a bit, I suppose. No matter, it can be easily repaired—crack? I say, lassie, look here!"

Under the pressure of Dugald's fingers the floor of the chest was swinging upward on an invisible hinge. Between it and the true bottom was a space of about three inches in depth. It seemed to be filled with a layer of yellowed cotton-wool.

For a long moment we held our breath, gazing at each other with eyes which asked the same question. Then Dugald lifted a corner of the sheet of cotton and plucked it away.

At once all the hues of the rainbow seemed to be flashing and sparkling before us. Rubies were there like great drops of the blood that the chest and its treasure had wrung from the hearts of men; sapphires, mirroring the blue of the tropic sky; emeralds, green as the island verdure; pearls, white as the milk of the coconuts and softly luminous as the phosphorescent foam which broke on the beach in the darkness. And there were diamonds that caught gleams of all the others' beauty, and then mocked them with a matchless splendor.

There were nine heavy bracelets, all jewel-set; twenty-three rings, eight of them for the hand of a man. Some of these rings contained the finest of the diamonds, except for three splendid unset stones. There were numbers of elaborate old-fashioned earrings, two rope-like chains of gold adorned with jewels at intervals, and several jeweled lockets. There was a solid gold snuff-box, engraved with a coat of arms and ornamented with seventeen fine emeralds. There were, besides the three diamonds, eighty-two unset stones, among them, wrapped by itself in cotton, a ruby of extraordinary size and luster. And there was a sort of coronet or tiara, sown all over with clear white brilliants.

Ours? Yes, for whether or not there were an infection of piracy in the very air of the island, so that to seize with the high hand, to hold with the iron grasp, seemed the law of life, we decided without a qualm against the surrender of our treasure-trove to its technical owners. Technical only; for one felt that, in essence, all talk of ownership by this man or that had long ago become idle. Fate had held the treasure in fee to give or to withhold. Senor Gonzales had had his chance at the chest, and he had missed the secret of the hidden hoard, had left it to lie forgotten under the sand until in some tropic storm it should be engulfed by the waters of the cave. More than this, had he not most specifically made over to me the Island Queen and all that it contained? This was a title clear enough to satisfy the most exacting formalist. And we were not formalists, nor inclined in any quibbling spirit to question the decrees of Fortune. As treasure-hunters, we had been her devotees too long.

So after all it was not my scornful skepticism but the high faith of Miss Higlesby-Browne which was justified by the event, and the Harding-Browne expedition left the island well repaid for its toils and perils. Plus the two bags of doubloons, which were added to the spoils, the treasure brought us a sum so goodly that I dare not name it, for fear of the apparition of Senor Gonzales and the Santa Marinar navy looming up to demand restitution. Like true comrades, we divided share and share alike, and be sure that no one grudging Cookie the percentage which each was taxed for his benefit.

And now I come to the purpose of this story—for though well concealed it has had one from the beginning. It is to let Helen, whoever and wherever she may be, if still of this world, know of the fate of Peter, and to tell her that when she asks for them she is to have my most cherished relics of the island, Peter's journal and the silver shoe-buckle which he found in the sand of the treasure-cave and was taking home to her.

Only, she must let me keep Crusoe, please.

LESSON FOR JUNE 25

REVIEW: JUDAH'S PROSPERITY AND ADVERSITY

GOLDEN TEXT—"Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord."—Ps. 33:12.
PRIMARY AND JUNIOR TOPIC—Men Who Obeyed God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—True and False Leaders of Judah.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Some Lessons From Judah's History.

I. Central Thought of Each Lesson Gathered Around the Key Words of the Day's Lesson Subject, Namely, Prosperity and Adversity.

A good outline is the following from Crannell's Pocket Lessons:

1. Judah's Prosperity. Based on—
(1) Reliance on God, lesson 1.
(2) Courageous Venture for God, lesson 2.

(3) Business Methods for God, lesson 3.
(4) The Vision of God, lesson 5.
(5) The Law and Leadership of God, lesson 7.

(6) Wise Leadership Back to God, lesson 8.
2. Judah's Adversity. Due to—

(1) Presuming Upon God's Blessing, lesson 4.
(2) Presuming Upon God's Purpose, lesson 9.

(3) Rejecting God's Word, lesson 10.
(4) Persecuting God's Messenger, lesson 11.

(5) Disloyalty to God and Man, lesson 12.
II. Golden Text Review.

Assign the texts to your class the preceding Sunday and ask them to show how the lesson illumines the text, or ask the class to prepare on all the texts and have the members of the class draw the text and give the answer.

III. Character Study or Portrait Review.

Assign the following characters the Sunday before: Asa, Joash, Jehoiada, Uzziah, Isiah, Hezekiah, Hilkiah, Jeremiah, Baruch, Jehoiakim, Ebed-melech, Zedekiah.

IV. The Summary Method.

This method calls for the salient facts of each lesson with a statement of its outstanding teaching.

Note the following suggestions:

Lesson 1. Asa cleared the land of idolatry and called upon Judah to seek the Lord. Because he rested upon the Lord, God gave him victory over his enemies.

Lesson 2. Athaliah attempted to destroy the seed royal and then usurp the throne. Jehoiada checkmated her by hiding away Joash for six years. At an appointed time Joash was crowned king and the usurper slain. Every attempt to thwart God's purpose fails.

Lesson 3. Jesus arose from the dead, showed himself to His disciples and sent them forth as witnesses for Him. Certainty of the resurrection of Christ is essential to witness for Him.

Lesson 4. Uzziah made a notable civic and military record, but in his pride he presumptuously intruded into the priest's office. As a judgment God smote him with leprosy. "Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall."

Lesson 5. Isiah's vision of God brought him to a sense of his sinfulness. Man's supreme need today is a vision of God.

Lesson 6. Isiah foresaw the end of all strife in the world through the establishment of Christ's kingdom. Peace and restoration shall come and remove from men's hearts the cause for strife.

Lesson 7. Hezekiah led his people back to God. This he did by means of the passover feast. The only way for a sinning and divided people to get back to God and be united is around the crucified Lord.

Lesson 8. Through the repairing of the temple the law of God was found. When it was read before the king it brought penitence and sorrow. God accepted his penitence and postponed the evil day.

Lesson 9. Jeremiah was arrested and brought to trial because he boldly proclaimed God's word to the nation. The one whom God calls to proclaim His word should faithfully discharge his duty regardless of what men may do unto him.

Lesson 10. Jehoiakim tried to destroy God's Word by burning it. Trying to destroy God's Word will not avert His judgments.

Lesson 11. Because of Jeremiah's fidelity to God he was cast into prison. Casting the prophet into the dungeon will not turn aside God's judgments.

Lesson 12. Nebuchadnezzar captured Jerusalem and carried away the people captives. Though God's judgments tarry they eventually fall.

In His Steps.

For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps.—I Peter 2:21.

Trusting Men.

The man who trusts men will make fewer mistakes than he who distrusts them.—Cavour.

A woman may always help her husband by what she knows, however little; by what she half knows, or mis-knows, she will only tease him.—Ruskin.

HOT WEATHER GOOD THINGS

The following drink is especially cooling and a great favorite on the farm: Take one quarter of a pound of oatmeal, one cupful of sugar and the strained juice of two lemons. Add one-half cupful of boiling water to the oatmeal, mix the other ingredients and pour into a gallon of boiling water, stir well, put through a sieve and chill before serving.

Chiffonade Tea Punch.—Prepare four cupfuls of strong tea, let it cool, then add to the juice of six lemons and one pineapple cut in bits, one pound of cooked cherries, one cupful of sugar. Stir until the sugar is dissolved, add one quart of carbonated water, a pint at a time. Serve with a sprig of mint and chopped ice in glasses.

Boston Cream.—Take three quarts of water and one and one-half pounds of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of lemon extract, two ounces of tartaric acid, and the whites of two eggs. Boil the water and allow it to get cold, then stir in the other ingredients, beating the whites until stiff. Mix well and pour into bottles and keep in the ice chest. When serving put a pinch of soda in a glass, half fill the glass with ice and fill with the cream. Drink immediately.

Chocolate Sirup.—This will keep if kept in the ice chest until it is used: Take three squares of chocolate, one ounce of cocoa, one and one-half pounds of sugar and a pint of water, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of vanilla. Boil the cocoa in one-half cupful of water in a double boiler ten minutes, grate the chocolate and mix it with one-third of its measure in sugar; add this to the boiling cocoa, stirring constantly, then add the remainder of the sugar and boil for ten minutes. Remove from the fire, strain and cool and add the vanilla. Add a tablespoonful of the sirup to cold milk or ice water, top with a marshmallow or spoonful of cream.

Blackberry Sherbet.—Strain the juice from a quart of preserved blackberries; add half as much water as juice and sugar if not sweet enough. Add a tablespoonful of lemon juice. Freeze to a mush, then add the whites of two eggs beaten stiff, and freeze hard. Grape juice, raspberry juice or other fruit juices may be prepared in the same way.

Coffee Frappe.—Make a strong infusion of coffee, strain, cool, sweeten and pack in ice and salt. Serve garnished with whipped cream. Chocolate or cocoa may be served in the same way.

Good food habits are an important part of personal hygiene and thrift. Children get such habits by having suitable amounts of suitable foods served to them and then being expected to eat what is set before them.

WORTH WHILE DISHES

The following dish is one much prized by our Belgian friends and is most tasty.

Belgian Hash.—Soak one-half cupful of prunes, one-half cupful of currants over night, add two finely chopped hocks of a pig cooked until the meat drops from the bones, one-half cupful of sugar and three-fourths of a cupful of vinegar with one-fourth of a cupful of water, a half nutmeg grated and a little salt. Put into the oven and cook until the liquid is absorbed. More sugar is liked by some, but to the person not used to sweet meats the above will be plenty.

Holland Doughnuts.—Take three cupfuls of bread dough, add one-fourth of a cupful of butter, one cupful of sugar, with nutmeg and cinnamon for flavoring. Mix well, then add two eggs slightly beaten, mix and roll out rather thin, cut in rounds, put a spoonful of jam or jelly in the middle, pinch the edges together, smooth into a ball and fry in deep fat. Roll in powdered sugar when cool and serve with coffee.

English Crumpets.—Dissolve one-half a yeast cake in one-quarter of a cupful of warm water, adding half a teaspoonful of sugar. Mix together one cupful each of water and milk, one tablespoonful of lard and scald it. Cool and add to the yeast with enough flour to make a soft batter. The thinness of the batter determines the success of the crumpet. Cover the bowl containing this mixture and let rise in a warm place until double its bulk. Heat a griddle and grease it with pork fat. Grease muffin rings and place them on the griddle. Fill about one-third full of very soft sponge and let the crumpets bake slowly until double their height, then increase the heat to make the griddle very hot and continue baking until the crumpets are brown on the bottom. When done they are white, soft and full of holes on top. Lay away in pairs, tops together, until cold. Then toast and spread them with butter, serving them piping hot.

At the town meeting of a small place "up country" a citizen made a motion that was seconded in an astonishing way.

"Mr. Moderator," he said, "I move that the town set aside money for three cuspidors to be stationed at proper places."

At that an old fellow in the rear of the hall who was hard of hearing rose stiffly to his feet. "I second the motion," he said, "and I move that Jack Davis be made one of 'em!"

Practically All.

Governor Allen of Kansas, who is an ardent and discreet book collector, was criticizing the work of a western novelist.

"The man's early work was good," he said, "but his work today is wretched. Literature once, it is now mere potboiling trash."

"This writer's case is the case of practically all our writers. They begin with a wealth of thought and they end with a thought of wealth."

Local Pride.

"Amos Gadd has sold his place and moved over to Willersville," related Old Riley Rezzidew of Petunia.

"What do you s'pose he done that for?" asked an acquaintance.

RADIO

THIRD ELEMENT IN THE VACUUM TUBE

Grid Added to Fleming Valve by Dr. Lee DeForest Was a Big Improvement.

Any device which will pass electricity in one direction and will wholly or partially obstruct the flow in the opposite direction is termed a rectifier, because when connected in the path of an alternating current it will suppress one-half of each cycle and therefore the circuit will be traversed by pulsating direct current. A rectifier also is said to possess unidirectional conductivity, meaning, of course, that it will conduct electricity in one direction of the grid circuit I-J-K-L. The battery in the grid circuit is called the "C" battery.

As a start let us suppose that "C" battery voltage is zero. The operation of the three-electrode tube would then be exactly like that of a two-electrode tube, just as though there were no grid. Like a two-electrode tube when the filament C-D is brought to incandescence by the "A" battery a steady stream of electrons will be given off, which will be drawn over to the plate E. Plate E is maintained at a positive potential with respect to the filament by the "B" battery.

Now if the grid is made positive with respect to the filament, it is possible to accelerate the flow of the electron stream from the filament to the plate; if the grid is made negative with respect to the filament, the flow of the electron stream from the filament to the plate will be retarded. Or in other words, by making the grid positive or negative with respect to the filament, it is possible to increase or counteract the space charge. The third electrode or grid thus offers a means of controlling the current in the rection only. Its ability to rectify currents of extremely high frequency determines its application in radio.

Due to its ability to rectify high frequency alternating currents the two-element (filament and plate) vacuum tube can be used in a radio receiver as a detector.

Fig. VI is a simple radio receiving circuit employing this type of two-element vacuum tube in place of a crystal detector.

Dr. J. A. Fleming of London, England, was the first to use a two-element tube of the type just described as a medium of rectifying high frequency radio currents. Fleming called his product a valve because it would let current flow in one direction but not in the other direction. The Fleming valve as a forerunner of the vacuplate circuit without changing the plate potential or the filament temperature.

The characteristic curve of a three electrode vacuum tube is shown in Fig. VIII. This diagram shows the relation of grid potential to plate current, assuming that the filament temperature and plate voltage remain constant.

It can be seen from the curve that by applying a negative potential of value E to the grid, the plate current can be reduced to zero. The negative charge on the grid will have the effect of a negative potential E with respect to the filament, making the negative charge so strong around the filament that the electrons cannot leave it. On the other hand, if a positive potential of value F' be applied um tube of today marked a very important step in the progress of the radio art. The Fleming valve, however, in its original form was not much better than other forms of rectifiers then in use and, owing to the greater ruggedness and ease of manipulation of the latter, did not come into general use as a detector.

Dr. Lee DeForest, an American, greatly improved the Fleming valve by adding a third electrode called the grid, which served the function of a control element and thus made it possible to utilize the feeble incoming signal currents to control more powerful local currents. The three-electrode vacuum tube of DeForest is the tube used so extensively today.

The third element which is called a grid and from which the three-electrode vacuum tube derives its name was placed by DeForest between the filament and the plate in the path of the electrons. The grid is a perforated plate or mesh of fine wire through the openings of which the electrons must pass in their journey from the filament to the plate.

Fig. VII is a diagrammatic sketch of the circuits of a three-electrode vacuum tube and is identical with the same as the sketch in Fig. III for a two-element vacuum tube with the addition of the grid circuit I-J-K-L. The battery in the grid circuit is called the "C" battery.

plate current because the electrons given off are being attracted to the plate and grid.

When the grid is maintained positive with respect to the filament a small current will flow in the grid circuit. Because of its being positive it will attract the electrons and have a charge given up to it by them.

A Little Bit Humorous

PSYCHOLOGICAL ADVANTAGE

"Are you going to send your boy Josh to college?"

"No," replied Farmer Cornstossel. "The wisest men have admitted that there are a great many things they don't know. To succeed, a man must have faith in his own ability. Josh has arrived at a point where he thinks he knows everything worth knowing, and I don't want to spoil his self-confidence."

"How did the pay-roll bandit happen to be captured?"

"Poor team work."

"Eh?"

"The bandit who was ordered to keep the engine of their motor car running for a quick getaway, while the other two bandits held up the cashier and grabbed the pay-roll, got interested in a passing flapper."

Not Pushing Himself.

"Did you interview many prominent people while you were in Washington?"

"Why, no," replied the modest citizen. "I remarked to a rather imposing doorkeeper that I thought it was a hot day, to which he agreed, but the only other important person I conversed with during my stay was a hotel clerk."

The Boomerang.

"Why is it you never get to the office on time in the morning?" demanded the head clerk angrily.

"It's like this," explained the tardy one; "you kept telling me not to watch the clock during office hours, and I have got out of the habit of watching it at home as well."—Sheffield Telegraph.

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

KNEW NO BOSS BY THAT NAME

But Young Man Finally Figured Out Just Whom His Acquaintance Might Have Meant.

Office politics are not unknown even in the government bureau. Indeed, though perhaps this should be whispered—maybe they're better known there than anywhere else.

A bright young man holds down a very responsible job in one government unit and holds it down very capably. (His nominal superior is generally recognized as merely a figurehead. Relations between the two are a bit strained.

The other day a Washingtonian, talking of the bright young man, remarked: "I nearly ran down your boss the other day in Scott circle." And he mentioned the boss by name.

The young man looked blank. "Have I a boss by that name?" he asked. "Oh, yes—I know whom you mean. We have a dead man up at the shop by that name."—Washington Post.

WHO SAID "WEAKER VESSEL"?

Little Incident Shows How Much Chance Mere Man Has With Real Mistress of Finance.

Mrs. Norman Whitehouse, the politician ex-suffragist who has gone in to the leather business, said at a tea in New York:

"Woman should succeed magnificently in business, she is such a past grand mistress of finesse.

"I know a pretty girl who once took the part of a palmist in a gypsy tent at a fair. A young man came in to have his fortune told, and the pretty girl, holding his hand in hers tenderly, said:

"You have an extraordinary character. Your most remarkable quality is generosity. You hate skinflints, you despise the money hoarder, and you look on avarice as a shameful vice. A large and almost reckless liberality marks your path through life."

"Thank you," said the young man, blushing and giggling. "You are flattering me, I'm afraid."

"Not at all," said the pretty girl, "and now I'm going to wrap you up these three dozen tickets for our turkey raffle. They're only a simoleon apiece. Three tens, a five, and a one. Thank you; that's just right."

The Joneses had imported their cook Dinah from a rustic part of South Carolina. The wastefulness and extravagance of Chicago people and the general disrespect with which money was treated was an unfailing source of surprise to her unsophisticated mind.

One day the Jones son and heir returned from the dentist and told his mother, in Dinah's presence, that the dentist had estimated it would cost $40 to have his teeth filled and put in good shape.

"Laws amassy, Miss Jones! Forty dollars for des filling that chile's teef! Why, you could buy him a whole new set fer dat money!" ejaculated the thrifty Dinah.

ILLINOIS NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

A wave of prosperity, unchecked by the nation-wide coal strike, is sweeping over Illinois and has taken up the slack labor, according to Director George B. Arnold, department of labor. "The building industries, which are in full blast in Chicago and many of the cities throughout the state," says Mr. Arnold, "have not only taken up the slack in labor but have given an impetus to all lines of business. Daily information shows that the supply of workers is below demand. Skilled farm labor long ago was fully employed. From reports considered authentic, indications show that there is enough coal in sight to run the country for 30 days at least."

Because the hundreds of people who visit the University of Illinois each summer come in such uneven numbers and at odd times, it is felt by university officials that their visits will be more beneficial if the majority of them come during some one period, when special preparation can be made to show them about the campus. Accordingly, the college of agriculture has arranged what will be known hereafter as "Open House Week," and it will be held this year from June 19 to 24. It is announced that every plot, every live stock herd, every experimental project will be at its best for the visitors that week.

Distribution of relief funds to the members of the United Mine Workers of Illinois, which is now under way, will mean an expenditure of approximately $455,000 if all the 91,000 members in the state receive the $5 cash payment as now contemplated. Checks have been received by all locals in the state except 20, which have not yet certified their membership for April, it is understood, although officials at District No. 1 are not divulging the plan for distribution and the method of procedure.

The new constitution of Illinois will not be submitted for ratification until after the mayoralty and other spring elections next year, probably during the last week in April. Whether it will be submitted to the voters in its entirety or in sections, which is permissible, remains to be determined. The agreement to put over the election until after the spring campaign was reported in committee and the feeling seems to be general that the convention will readily adopt the recommendation.

An evangelistic movement supported by a well-defined course of Bible study to reach the 3,000,000 residents of Illinois who were declared to be without church connections was urged as part of the program of the Illinois Sunday School association at the annual convention in Galesburg. The enlarged program was outlined in the report given to the executive committee of the association.

Havana furnished ten of the thirty-five new cases of smallpox reported during the past week to the state department of public health. Of 165 new cases of diphtheria, Chicago furnished 109. Of 104 new cases of scarlet fever Chicago reported 63, and Rushville township, Schuyler county, 5. Chicago reported 126 of the 162 new cases of pneumonia reported.

Dr. H. H. Hanly of Peoria has been appointed a member of the medical examining committee of the state department of registration, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Dr. L. C. Well water from wells near the city will be flowing in the Elgin water pipes within a short time to replace river water now being used, according to statements by city officials. The city has dug several wells in the last few months.

Five miles of rope will inclose the line of march of the Mysterious Order of Velled Prophets in Rock Island on the night of June 28. The prophets will march to the music of 40 bands. Twenty patrols will add a splash of color to the parade, which will mark the closing of the sessions of the order to be held June 26 and 27.

An eleventh hour reprieve from Governor Small saved Ignatz Potz, convicted of the murder of William Peterson, Winthrop Harbor motorcycle policeman, from hanging in Waukegan. The governor granted a 60-day stay of sentence on the ground that "important alleged circumstances not hitherto brought out had come to his attention." The Supreme court had refused a stay of execution. An attorney, representing the sentenced man, told Governor Small that his client's trial had been rushed to clear the way for the governor's own trial, now in progress.

The people of Illinois paid into the United States treasury in income taxes for the year 1920 over $12,000,000 more than was paid by the people of the eleven Southern states east of the Mississippi and south of the Ohio river, according to statistics of income, made public by the commissioner of internal revenue. The total amount of income taxes for 1920 paid into the treasury by all the states and territories of the Union was $1,075,053,686, of which Illinois contributed $85,409,203, or 7.93 per cent, ranking third in the list of states.

Col. L. G. Nutt, who has been waging an independent "clean-up" campaign of Illinois dry law violators following his assignment in Chicago from Washington, is to be in supreme command of the dry enforcement activities in the state, according to Washington dispatches. Charles A. Gregory, who has heretofore been chief state enforcement officer, will retain his office, but will take his orders from Colonel Nutt, who will hold the title of "associate director and personal representative of Mr. Haynes."

The Illinois constitutional convention has reconvened at Springfield, and indications are that the session will continue for ten days before the proposed new constitution is approved on the order of third reading and made ready for submission to the voters of the state. The committee on submission and address, named recently by President Charles Woodward, is expected to hold an early session and decide upon the date of the special election at which the document will be voted upon and also plan for a campaign of publicity.

Illinois coal operators, through Dr. C. F. Honnold, secretary, announced they would not consent to enter a joint conference with other states to settle the miners' strike. "Illinois operators will now only negotiate with their own men in Illinois," Doctor Honnold said, and pointed out that the request of Illinois operators for a joint conference with union heads had been turned down several times by the national organization. "The time is passed when joint conferences with any other states is desirable," he said.

A bride and groom on their honeymoon were killed when an overloaded airplane piloted by John Metzger at the airfield of the Aero club of Illinois, Eighty-third street and Cicero avenue, Chicago, crashed to the ground from a height of 300 feet. The groom was William C. Wheelock of Zion City, an official of the Marshall Field & Co. lace works there. The bride was formerly Miss Beulah Vaneva Beshears, instructor of art at the University of Valparaiso, Valparaiso, Ind. They had been married June 3.

The "measuring worm" is doing a great deal of damage to trees in St. Clair county, and is also causing the death of large numbers of fish in lakes and streams, according to deputy state game inspectors. The worms grow in trees along the water's edge, from which they fall into the water, and fish that swallow the worms are poisoned.

Lake county officials must wait until the Small trial has been completed and the county clerk of that county has filed a certified account of the expenses of the trial before Sangamon county will pay the bill, according to the action of the board of supervisors. This action is provided by law and is the only one that could be taken.

A recommendation that contracts between miners and operators expire in the late summer or fall instead of in the spring, which, it is declared, is of advantage to the operators, is included in a resolution by coal miners of local No. 12, forwarded to state headquarters at Springfield.

GAINS 8 POUNDS IN TWO WEEKS' TIME

Dyspepsia Entirely Overcome and She Eats, Sleeps and Feels Better Than in Years, Says Boston Resident.

"I have actually gained eight pounds in two weeks' time and am now eating better, sleeping better and feeling better than I have in three or four years," said Mrs. Celesta Fell, 32 Prince street, Boston, Mass., recently, in telling of the great benefits she has derived from the use of Tanlac.

"My stomach was in such a bad fix before I took Tanlac that I did not dare eat much of anything, for if I did I would have so much pain and distress from indigestion that I felt like I was going to die. I was so run down and weak from lack of nourishment that I could not do my housework."

"I was so nervous I couldn't keep still during the day nor sleep at night. I can see now if it had not been for Tanlac I would have had to give up entirely. I am now feeling strong and healthy and all the credit belongs to Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

FROM GIRLHOOD TO WOMANHOOD

Woman Relied Upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Emporia, Kansas.—"I began using Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines years ago when I was a girl."

For several years I had severe pains at menstrual periods, making me very weak and interfering with my regular duties. I tried several remedies without obtaining relief. I was induced to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound by friends and it restored me to normal health. I often have occasion to do recommend your Vegetable Compound to my friends who have troubles similar to my own. You may use these facts as a testimonial."—EVA ALDRICH, 218 Union St., Emporia, Kansas.

There are many women who first used our Vegetable Compound during their girlhood days. They found it a valuable help during trying periods. In later years they use it whenever they feel those annoying symptoms which women often have.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a woman's medicine. It is prepared carefully from the best quality of medicinal plants, whose properties are especially adapted to correct the troubles women have.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

FORWARD, BACKWARD

EVERYTHING in nature is moving toward a great purpose. There is no inactivity in the atoms or in the spheres; no turning backward, no indecision, but a constant movement in a forward direction, carrying us away from the yesterdays to new dawns and new days.

The winds, the tides, the spinning of the earth in its prescribed orbit, the rising and the setting of the sun, the coming and the going of the seasons, the blooming and the fading of verdure and flowers, all bear evidence of progress, and eternal life.

Being a minute part of nature, performing your little role in the great scheme of creation, reciting your lines, do you ever pause to ask yourself whether you are moving forward or backward?

In spite of any thought you may entertain in the matter, you are going ahead or drifting behind, just as surely as the roses bloom in summer and the snows blanket the ground in winter.

You are better equipped for your life-work today than you were yesterday, or less efficient.

Your mental and physical forces have undergone an imperceptible change and you have changed with them.

You are a trifle more dexterous in your work or slightly more clumsy.

In the last 24 hours you have not remained in a quiescent state, for the laws of motion have been silently at work, carrying you a step or two forward or backward, setting you down at the threshold of a new day a slightly changed being for better or worse.

Uncommon Sense

WHAT A WOMAN DID

IT SEEMS probable that cancer, one of the most deadly of the enemies of mankind, will soon be conquered by the use of radium.

Since the beginning of time this element has existed in nature. For the last score or more of years the presence of some unseen but powerful force has been suspected. Scientists sought to discover what it was, but sought in vain, till a quiet little Polish woman, after years of laborious experiment, discovered it.

That a woman should have made this discovery—one of the most notable in all history—is highly important.

It disproves forever the old contention that there is any difference between the brain of a man and that of a woman.

The highest concentration, the greatest reasoning power, the most indomitable determination were required for the years of work which had to be done before this discovery could be made.

A man stumbled on a gold mine or a diamond deposit by accident. But to find a metal which exists in the most minute quantities, and which must be extracted by infinite pains from the surrounding elements, has to be located which you may or may not observe as you take hold of today's duties.

Before night, however, you may become conscious of a new-born power, or a lack of it, and wonder what the transformation means.

Its significance is clear. You are going forward or backward, keeping in accord with the eternal motion of things of which you are a part.

If you would move forward, keep step with the men and women who are laboring and achieving in the great purpose, you must watch your every thought, impulse and act, and ask yourself at the beginning of each day whether you are pressing toward victory or turning toward defeat.

"Forward or backward?" ought to be your initial question at dawn, and your final query at night. Let this self-examination become a habit, and in a little while you will be glad that you acquired it.

SCHOOL DAYS

first, and laboriously separated afterward.

Countless experiments entered into Mme. Curie's work, and only a remarkable human being could have brought it to a successful conclusion.

Much is yet to be done before the power of radium over cancer can be thoroughly tested.

But this can be left to others, as the consolidation of a captured position in war can be left to subordinates after a brilliant general has won an engagement.

Mme. Curie has set an example, not only for her own sex, but for all the searchers for truth in the world.

Her achievement is an inspiration, and probably to the end of time, will be an inspiration to the whole world.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"BRICK"

LIKE many other expressions which, at first glance, appear to belong to the slang of a very recent period, "He's a brick" dates back to the days of ancient history, Plutarch being authority for the statement that Lycurgus used it in connection with the defense of Sparta.

The story goes that Lycurgus, being a man of few words, was asked whether Sparta should be inclosed with walls, and replied: "That city is well fortified which has a wall of men instead of brick."

Another historical allusion of the same nature was made when an ambassador from Epirus, on a diplomatic mission, was shown by the king of Sparta over his capital. The ambassador was amazed to see that the city was apparently unfortified and remarked about the matter.

"Indeed," replied the king. "Thou canst not have looked carefully. Come with me tomorrow and I will show you the walls of Sparta."

On the following morning the king led his guest out upon the plains, where his army was drawn up in full battle force. There, pointing proudly to the solid battalions of armed men, he exclaimed: "Thou beholdest the walls of Sparta—every man of them a brick!"

The antiquity of the expression in English may be gathered from the fact that the Ingoldsby Legends contain the following couplet:

"In brief, I don't stick to declare
Father Dick,
So they called him for short, was a regular brick."

THE FLAT-IRON

The flat-iron was making a funny little squeaking sound as it was pushed back and forth over the clothes which had just been dried.

"My name may not be the most beautiful name in the world," the flat-iron said, "but I certainly do serve my purpose."

"What do you mean by saying you serve your purpose?" asked the bath towel which was being ironed. "You serve my purpose, that is what you do. It is my purpose, my wish, that you iron me."

"Hello, Party Handkerchief."

"Nonsense, towel," said the flat-iron, "it wouldn't do you much good no matter how hard you wished to be ironed if there was no one who was willing to see that you were ironed."

"Why, you could wish a bath towel most intense wishes and it wouldn't do a particle of good. Not a bit."

"Well, as far as that is concerned," said the bath towel, "it wouldn't do you much good if you wished to glide back and forth over the clothes if some one didn't help you."

"No," said the flat-iron, "but then when I say that I serve my purpose well I mean that I do what I wish to do."

"I only wish to iron when others wish to use me. I never have any desire to suddenly kick up a great fuss and go all about the place ironing this and ironing that."

"Your purpose, so you said, was to have me iron you. You should have said it was your purpose or wish that I should iron you, provided it was some other's wish, too."

"But no matter, bath towel, you're not as well mannered as you might be, and you're not the smooth speaker I am."

"You're a bit rough, bath towel."

"True, true," agreed the bath towel, "but then you know that is the way they like to have me. They like my rough ways. They truly do. But it seems I am leaving now, flat-iron. Good-by. May we meet again some day along this friendly ironing board."

"Good-by, bath towel. Come again."

Then the flat-iron went back on the stove for a bit and warmed itself once more and while it was doing this another flat-iron was gliding back and forth over the ironing board and over the garments that had been put upon the ironing board.

At last, the first flat-iron went back again. "Yes, it was as I said, I certainly do serve my purpose. And the fact that my name—flat-iron—isn't an exciting, thrilling name means nothing, nothing at all."

"Why, hello, party handkerchief! Where have you been keeping yourself?"

"I've been quiet for a long time," said the party handkerchief, "but my rest was very pleasant and I had the sweetest of dreams, for I was kept near a lovely sachet."

"Oh, how sweet a sachet it was. I rested myself upon it and the sweetness of the sachet went straight into me and made me so happy."

"I was as sweet as could be when I made my appearance at the party two days ago. Such a party as it was, flat-iron."

"Do tell me about it. I'm not a social fellow myself. But I like to hear of the happenings in high society," said flat-iron.

"Well, there was dancing and a birthday cake, and there were presents and there was lots of chatter, and only the best and most handsome of our family were represented."

"By that I mean that only the loveliest and daintiest and best of the handkerchief family were at the party."

"There were the Lace cousins, and the Hand-Embroidered aunts, and all of the very finest of us. It was certainly a magnificent party; but I must be going. Good-by, flat-iron."

"Good-by," said the flat-iron. "Ah, what a fine life is mine. I meet party handkerchiefs, bath towels, dresses—I meet the luxurious and I meet the simple. And I'm equally nice to all."

"Ah, here comes Pink Cotton Dress. I always did like her."

"Hello!" said Pink Cotton Dress. "Goodness, I never thought I'd see you again, flat-iron. I've had such an exciting time. What with climbing trees and making mud-pies!"

"Well, I can tell you life is a lark for Pink Cotton Dress. But I seem to stand the strain well. It's such fun to be a play dress of a jolly little girl."

And the flat-iron seemed to understand.

"Here Comes Pink Cotton Dress."

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.

Western Canada's Farming Possibilities

Recent advances in the price of farm products and the possibility of further increases will warrant an increase in the price of Western Canada Farm Lands, now exceptionally low considering their producing value.

The depression is now over, and normal times are at hand. Western Canada came through the late trying period with a stout heart and a preparedness to take advantage of the better times that we are approaching.

To take advantage of the low rates now in force, and for other information, apply to

AS STALE bread will accumulate, a little care is needed to keep ahead of the growth. If dry bread is put through the meat chopper it may then be used for croquettes, meat balls and any number of dishes. Keep the crumbs in a glass jar, sealed from the air.

Tip-Tip Omelet.

Boil one-half cupful of milk, add one tablespoonful of butter and one cupful of bread crumbs, seasoning to taste. Beat the yolks of three eggs and add them, then stir in the stiffly beaten whites. Pour into a buttered omelet pan and cook until well browned.

Ham Patties.

Take two cupfuls of ham chopped fine, three cupfuls of bread crumbs, three eggs and enough sweet milk to make a soft batter. Mix well, drop into gem pans, drop a piece of butter in each and bake until brown.

Fruit Betty.

Put a layer of crumbs in a well buttered baking dish, cover with blueberries, canned or fresh, then add another layer of bread with a bit of butter and sugar if needed. Bake until well heated through. Serve with cream and sugar.

Brown Bread.

Take two cupfuls of stale bread crumbs, one and one-half pints of cold water, mix and soak over night, then rub through a sieve one and one-fourth cupfuls of molasses, one and one-half cupfuls each of graham flour, cornmeal and rye meal, two teaspoonfuls of salt, three and one-half teaspoonfuls of soda and one and three-fourths cupfuls of cold water. Mix well and steam three hours.

Half City, Half Desert.

On the Gulf of Aden is a spot of barren sand where a city springs up every winter and almost disappears in the summer. This place is called Berbera. A market is held there every winter and during the height of trading it becomes a city of rude huts and tents with a population of over 20,000. During the summer the place is deserted.

Green, White and Black.

Two men passed each other in Washington street.
"Hello, Green," said one.
"How are you, White?" said the other.
And they both are black.

Merchants from Frankfort, Beecher, Monee, Manteno, Manhattan and other towns attended the annual meeting and banquet of the Retail Merchants' Association of Northern Illinois, held at the Immanuel church in Peotone last Thursday.

Mokena was represented by D. Kolber. Matteson was not represented. A Mr. Johnson, a hardware dealer of Minneapolis, gave a live wire talk to the merchants. He dwelt at length on the following points: Enthusiasm, Optimism, Ambition, Efficiency, Service.

The Ladies' Aid of the Immanuel church served supper at $1.50 per plate.

The next meeting and banquet of this association will be held in Frankfort.

A congregational banquet was held at the M. E. church parlors Friday night. There was a fine dinner. Dr. H. E. Rompel, pastor of the Ottawa Street M. E. church of Joliet was the banquet speaker. All the guests enjoyed a good time, a good meal and good fellowship.

Rev. Theodore Miner, pastor of the Frankfort M. E. church, has made the following suggestions to his congregation to act on:

1. Construct a regulation-size, up-to-date tennis court on ground north of church. Organize a tennis club, and conduct tennis tournament.

2. The Epworth League will welcome any young man or woman between the ages of 16 and 35 into full membership, and everybody to social and devotional meetings.

3. Boost the Sunday school. No better place for your boys and girls from 9:45 to 10:45 every Sunday morning. Come along with them.

4. Like to sing? Join the Choral Society. All parts needed.

5. The church needs to be painted. What are you planning to give?

6. Join the Church! It is a big and daring step to take. But every Christian in town ought to belong to one of the two organizations here established solely to serve the people and the community. Line up!

7. Make a habit of attending church services regularly. Come praying.

8. Help to create a friendlier, more cordial atmosphere in all of our church relationships. Remember the Eleventh Commandment: "Love One Another."

9. As early as convenient, make payment on your pledge to the church budget. If at all possible, after thought and prayer, increase your subscription.

10. Suggestions for improvement of services, societies, bulletins, methods, etc., are always welcome. When visiting our churches out of town, bring back suggestions and samples.

The Frankfort Industrial Club and the local baseball club are planning on making things hum in Frankfort the Fourth of July. One of the attractions, which will bring hundreds of people to town, will be a ball game on the new diamond on the Borman grove, when three teams will play for a hundred-dollar purse. A very exciting time is anticipated, as these are all crack teams.

The new diamond at the Borman grove has been leased for seven years, and is proving an ideal location for a ball diamond.

Clarence Folkers, who has just returned from the University of Illinois, is about to leave for Camp Knox, Ky., an R. O. T. C. training camp, where he will spend five weeks taking up field artillery practice.

Wm. T. Folkers and John Staff left last week for a ten days' fishing trip to Excelsior, Minn.

The 14-year old child of Mr. and Mrs. Liberty of Spencer fell off the porch and injured its elbow, which it had broken in a fall seven weeks before. Dr. W. V. Hedges of Frankfort was called in on the case.

Roy Koerner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Koerner, has been confined to his home with a quite severe case of blood poison, caused by a cut in his hand. He is improving nicely.

Her Boast.

"Haven't I made you what you are?" asked the wife proudly. "Darling," answered the husband, "have I ever reproached you for it?"

"City of Peace."

A former city on the site of Jerusalem was called Salem. An Assyrian inscription has been found calling the place Urusalem, which meant "city of peace."

GREEN GARDEN

A $10,000 fire on the farm of Louis Kohler, one-fourth mile west of Manhattan, burned four horses, a cow and a calf, some chickens, hay, grain and several buildings, also farming tools.

The fire was discovered shortly before 9 o'clock Monday night. The family had retired, and were awakened by neighbors with cries of "Fire!" The reflection on the sky attracted about 1000 persons, who formed a volunteer brigade, but an effort to check the flames

About fifteen tons of hay, farming tools, chicken house, milk house, tool shed and a large barn are included in the loss, which was partly covered by insurance.

The First and Second M. E. churches held their annual Sunday school picnic at Andres last Thursday. It being an ideal day and good roads, drew a large crowd, people coming from miles around.

The most charming tale which has come out in many a month. Here is the most entrancing novel of love-interest and heart-interest.

MARY MARIE BY ELEANOR H. PORTER

WHEN "Just David" was published readers thought it the most adorable story of a child ever written; then appeared "Pollyanna" by the same authoress and it took the country by storm; now she has given us "Mary Marie," which is better than either.

This wonderful child was Mary to her staid, bookish, serious-minded father. To her vivacious, laughter-loving mother she was Marie; so they named her Mary Marie, and to keep peace in the family she had to develop a dual nature in keeping with the two names.

Mary Marie

By ELEANOR H. PORTER
Author of "Pollyanna," "Oh, Money!
Money!," "Just David," etc.

"Pollyanna," with its optimism and cheer was such a clever story that it resulted in the formation of a cult with thousands of members. "Mary Marie" is even better.

It could appropriately have been entitled, "Mary Marie and Marriage," for it gives an answer to the great family problem of what happens to the children when father and mother are divorced. The child's point of view is presented here for the first time in a work of fiction.

It is Such a Superb Story, interesting to men, women and children, that it has been selected for serial reproduction in
